is taking 500mg of tylenol (1 extra strength pill) 4-5 days a week safe? 28F, 180lbs, 5'1. no current (prescription) meds only tylenol and omeprazole to manage a few chronic conditions. i currently have been diagnosed with gastritis, spondylolisthesis, degenerative disc disease, fibromyalgia, and the occasional migraine with excedrine usually clears up. my question is, is taking 500mg of tylenol 4-5 days a week safe? i have no liver issues and surprisingly it takes the edge off of my pain enough to conduct my day and since i can't take NSAIDs often due to my stomach issues it's enough. i've been offered other pain meds (narcotics) but they make me extremely ill and induce panic attacks. i'm just worried long term use of tylenol with negatively affect my liver even at a low dose. very rarely do i need to take 2 pills. thanks! What happens if you take too much tylenol? Hi, so Im 19 AFAB (weight 140 and almost 5'4) and Ive been in a lot of pain today. So I took the max amount of tylenol and Im tempted to take more... how bad would that be? what symptoms would I be looking at if I did so? and, if I shouldnt do that, what other pain relief can I take instead? sorry if this is a dumb question btw, Idk where else to ask ;-; eta: I dont take any other medicines btw (if that info is needed)	Tylenol
Am I able to take more Tylenol? Pain after ingrown toenail surgery is pretty bad. Can I take more Tylenol? I just had ingrown toenail surgery done today on both my toes with granuloma debridement and it was pretty painful. I took 3 Tylenol at 8am, 3 Tylenol at 12pm, 2 Tylenol at 4pm. How much paracetamol is too much? 37f 63kg non smoker non drinker
Currently battling influenza A, temps running at 39.9 and chest and throat filled with very thick hard mucus. Joints are swollen and I am in agony, can't walk, can't hold still, I've had swine flu before and it did not hit me like this. The problem is the only combination of meds that has helped with the pain is 2 x paracetamol at 500mg each and 2 x ibuprofen at 200mg each. They only keep the pain and fever down for about 4 hours. I know I shouldn't exceed 8 paracetamols a day but honestly the pain is so bad it's making me think very horrible thoughts. Any suggestions of how to combine or time these ? Dr won't see me as I am symptomatic, did testing at a lab. TIA

Ibuprofen Dosing I've been dealing with a tooth/mouth ache for 4 weeks. 35, Female, 5'6, 215lbs. I've been through two rounds of z-pack with no improvement, so probably not an infection?! We got it narrowed down to a molar and I got that sucker pulled on Wednesday 8/23. Before getting it pulled I was taking Advil pretty consistently, 2-3 (400-600mg) every 6 hours. When I got to tooth pulled I was prescribed 5-325 Hydrocodone Acetaminophen. I didn't have much pain right after getting it pulled but on Monday 8/28 the pain came back and wayyyy worse. I started with just Advil and now I've been taking the Vicodin and alternating Advil. Saw dentist today 8/30, he is a little stumped as to why I'm in pain. He gave another z-pack (if needed) and says it's a possible dry socket or the tooth next to it cracked. I'm going to be in pain until we figure this out. Anywho... My question is, how much ibuprofen is too much? The bottle says to not exceed 6 pills (1200 mg) a day but then internet says 1200 OTC and 3200 prescription. What is prescription ibuprofen and how is it different than OTC? I don't plan on taking this much for long but I have to until we find what is causing the pain.

Can I take 2000mg of paracetamol at once? 34 Female, 70kg, 155cm, Non-Smoker/Drinker, Caucasian TLDR: I'm having really bad abdominal pain and cramping and the doctor here only recommends paracetamol. The 1000mg dose is not helping. —full context— Medication * Levothyroxine 50mg Daily * Dimor 2mg (about 1 tablet daily) * Desogestrel (Birth Control) * Vitamin D 1000IU (Prescribed for chronic insufficiency) * Paracetamol 1000-4000 mg daily (2x 500mg tablets at time as needed for pain) Official Diagnoses/Tests * Hashimotos (Controlled with TSH of 1.2 on meds as of 3 months ago) * 3 Adenomas with low grade dysplasia in colon (5mm, 1cm, 5mm) (found and removed incidentally on colonoscopy) * Hiatal Hernia (Repaired last year with Nissen Fundoplication) * Colonoscopy and blood work come back negative for evidence of Crohns, UC, and Microscopic Colitis * Endoscopy negative for celiac * AnA panel is clear minus the high TPO from the hashimotos * CRP elevates off and on, but never to an extreme, Leukocytes are always moderately elevated. Symptoms * Chronic watery diarrhea 8-10x a day without dimor; 1-2x a day with) * Without dimor this quickly results in swelling immense pain and blood * Constant lower GI pains and cramps, significant during bowel movements, mostly concentrated on the left side. * Nausea and Vomitting (more like retching post nissen) * Fatigue, Joint Pain (sometimes red and hot but infrequently), Muscle Aches * On and off Deficiencies (vitamin D, folate, salts, potassium) Over the last several years I've been on a rollercoaster with my health and can't seem to get the full picture of what's happening to me. No doctor seems to be quite sure and brushes it off as just IBS-D. I cannot exercise as I want, as it wrecks my body and leaves me laid up in bed with pain. I get days where I can't eat from pain and am visibly trembling to the point I cant hold a pen to write. I just want to be a normal active 34 year old. Does anyone have any leads of ideas of what I should be asking or pushing for? Can IBS really cause this extreme of pain and suffering? I am just so tired of being tired and in pain. Why would a young female have Dysplastic Adenomas???' I just feel so hopeless and want answers or next steps or advice for pain management. Thank you.

Question about tylenol dosage for viral stomach infection. 27-year old Male My understanding of tylenol is: The maximum dose is 4000 mg in a day. The recommended to avoid too much damage is 3,000 mg. An adult dose is 1,000 mg every 6 hours. What do you think of doing 500 every 3 - 4 hours until I hit 3,000? I likely wouldn't hit 3,000 due to sleep. I am asking this question because I took a 500 and it seemed to clear most of the pain from the viral stomach infection. Yet, with the 6 hours I don't have it in my system from the three doses of 1,000, it's been difficult to function at all. As for asking my general practitioner, I moved recently and my insurance hasn't come through, I don't have one. I went to a hospital where they didn't require insurance, and they told me to take pepcid, zofran (Which I couldn't afford.), and Tylenol. Tylenol is the only thing that has lessened my pain oddly enough. But so far it's still been uncomfortable due to the way I've been dosing.

28F 5'7 130 lbs extra strength Tylenol Hi, I got my Covid booster and flu shot this morning and I'm really suffering with body aches from it. I took 2 500mg Tylenol ES around 11 am then again at maybe 7 or 8 pm I'm not 100% sure. It's not 12:52 AM, am I safe to take my next dose? I'm in so much pain so I'm wondering if I'm ready for my next dose. Nothing I take has any interactions with Tylenol ES. Thank you so much for your help! -28F begging for some relief 22m, needing advice on dosage i'm going to the doctors tomorrow, but i just need some quick advice if possible - i took 200mg ibuprofen around 6:40 pm EST for a 102 fever & it went down to 100. i then took another 200mg ibuprofen around 12:50 am EST because my fever went back up to 101 - i want to try a 500mg tylenol that i have next since i have GERD and it doesnt bother me as much as ibuprofen does, but i'm unsure if it's safe to do so after taking 400mg of ibuprofen? if it is safe, how long should i wait before taking it? thanks so much!

Tylenol_Advil

Tylenol dosage Online I've read that the maximum dosage for Tylenol is 4000 mg for 24 hours, and not more than 1000 mg at once. I can't find much about my next question but basically what I'm wondering is how bad is it on the liver to have 1,300 mg at once not often but when going through extreme flairs of chronic pain and need a bit more to help, what's the likelihood of it causing issues now or later down the road. I basically get so many norcos per month that's 10/325. My tolerance has been increasing and I've been on them on and off for two years now. I initially would take two of those in the morning and two in the evening for a total of 40mg/1,300 mg in total. I did that for like 9 months straight until I had switch insurances, due to kaiser refusing cortisone shots or to try anything other than narcotics to treat my herniated disc. That led me to having no medication all of August and September last year and then that basically reset my tolerance to 0 for the opiate part of the norcos. I was re prescribed norcos back to March of this year and by the end of summer I had a tolerance built again, at first I only needed one, then 1 1/2, then 2 and finally 3. Recently I've moved up to 4 at once and I'm going to try and take a break to reset my tolerance again because I don't want to need 4 to need pain relief. I'm switching to a better pain doctor soon and I'm hoping this next one will actually listen to me about my pain levels. I don't want to kill myself with Tylenol. I've been okay with no stomach pain from taking 1300 mg at once. I just even when I only needed 1 or 2 norcos would take extra Tylenol and add more because I was told by doctors that adding more Tylenol on the side should help my pain but obviously if taking 3-4 Hydrocodone tablets I'm not going to and even more Tylenol. I tried adding in ibprofuen (cause I wanted to make it like a dual action advil where it has both Tylenol and ibprofuen for back pain) and it did help but it made my stomach hurt all 3 times I tried so I stopped. I'm just going through a bad flare up so now that I'm on day 4 of needing 4 norcos once a day, I'm going to give my stomach and body a break for the next few weeks even if I'm hurting as I always like to give my body a break of medicines, I do the same for my muscle relaxers and even going through periods in the past where id take a lot of ibprofuen for like two weeks straight for relief then stopped for a few weeks to help my body have a break from medicines and reducing tolerance to the meds. Also when i moved up need 3-4 norcos I always do it once a day not twice a day for the lower dosages I started out on like I used too. Also im 5'1 and 130 pounds now. Last year and up until I started losing weight when I started wegovy may of this year I lost 30 pounds between then and now but prior i was 160 due to gaining weight from starting depo shot December of 2022 to December of 2023. I stopped depo to try and lose the weight it made me gain but by the time May almost June rolled around and I lost nothing my doctor approved wegovy. Again I don't take these high doses of Tylenol frequently or All the time! Its only been this year when I've started using so much at once and the most I allow myself to do it once a day is 3-4 days at a time with weeks in between until I my back has another flare up from my 9 mm disc herniation in my low back Took to much Advil? Hey, I'm 18F, 5'5", 123 lbs. I'm on Day 1 of my period, and I get really bad cramps on the first day, but today has been way worse than usual — I can barely function. The pain is so intense that I can't even do basic things like work or get out of bed. What I've Taken So Far: -Midnight: 2 Advil liquid gels (400 mg total) -8:30 AM: 3 Advil liquid gels (600 mg) -2:00 PM: 1 Advil liquid gel (200 mg) So, I've taken 1200 mg of ibuprofen today. I felt fine for a bit after the 8:30 AM dose, but since about 2:00 PM, my cramps have gotten way worse. Now I'm in so much pain that I can't even think straight, let alone work or function. all I can do rn is just lay in bed with a heating pad and try to survive Current Symptoms: -Severe pelvic cramps (feels like my stomach is being twisted in knots) -Lower back pain that's almost just as bad -Calf cramps and leg pain -Feeling sick, weak, and dizzy (I feel very hot flushed) The pain is making me feel like I'm just totally out of it — I can barely concentrate I've had my period for 10 years, but this is only the second time in my life it's been this intense. It's never happened this bad, I don't know what's happening. I really don't want to go to the ER, though, because I feel like I'll just be brushed off as "it's just your period." But honestly, I feel like I can't even function normally right now. My Questions: -Can I take more Advil? I've already taken a lot today and I'm worried about messing up my stomach or liver. If I can't, how long should I wait to take more? - is it okay to take Tylenol on top of the Advil I've already taken? I'm really struggling and just need any advice or recommendations right now. The pain is literally stopping me from doing anything, and I feel so helpless. Appreciate any help, thank you!

Finally got off that Xtampza (wasn't working) I posted a while back about my pain medication, Xtampza ER 9 mg twice daily, not working for my various aches and pains which are usually related to Ehlers Danlos Syndrome, classic type. I just started with a pain management clinic June 8 of this year and at times I've been surprised that I haven't been dismissed due to having a take extra medication when I was recovering from a rough incisional hernia repair in August. I was first referred to pain management shortly after an unsuccessful shoulder surgery I had April 18. Before the surgery, my rheumatologist had been prescribing the maximum amount of Tylenol #3 allowed and when I asked her to prescribe it for me following my shoulder surgery, feeling like I was ready to stop taking the oxycodone prescribed by my surgeon (I found out pretty quickly that I was not ready), my rheumatologist prescribed the Tylenol #3 but only for 1 tablet twice daily as needed! I was shocked because she'd been prescribing 1-2 tablets every 4 hours as needed for about a year (when I wasn't on stronger pain medication following surgery-I have a lot of surgeries, mostly because of the Ehlers Danlos Syndrome. So I was taken care of by my surgeon for a while longer after my rheumatologist told me that she no longer felt that she could treat my chronic pain and that I needed to be treated by a pain management doctor. I wasn't sure why, and I didn't think pain management would prescribe narcotics, especially at the first appointment, but I filled out the paperwork before my appointment, which included signing the pain management opioid agreement if I wanted to. I had stopped the oxycodone completely for a week by that time, with a lot of help from medical marijuana, so I thought it was reasonable when the doctor prescribed 5 mg oxycodone IR three times daily and I thought it would be effective since I had stopped taking it completely for a week. But 2 weeks later, it was no longer working and I was still having a lot of pain in my shoulder at the time. I discussed it with my doctor on the phone following the next appointment, which was for injections. He agreed to put me on an extended release oxycodone (which turned out to be Xtampza ER) and it wasn't until the end of August when I finally started it. I found it to be pretty much completely ineffective most of the time, but every now and then it would work, so it was inconsistent and I suspect my digestive system didn't help. I went back to the doctor early in September to discuss changing my medication again and we thought maybe I just had too much of a tolerance for oxycodone after being on it for so long and also that immediate release medication might be a better choice for me. We decided that we would try morphine sulfate immediate release for the next fill, so I had to wait until September 29 to start it. I wasn't expecting to get much pain relief but surprisingly, I've been getting more relief from it (just two 15 mg tablets daily) than I'd had since starting pain management. I didn't think oral morphine worked too well, from what I read, but I thought it was possible it might be helpful for me because my cousin had gotten more relief from morphine than from any other pain medication and she had some genetic testing done years ago to see what was up with her odd responses to a lot of medications. I think I just didn't realize how much of a tolerance I'd built up for oxycodone, taking it since April. I'm worried about developing a tolerance for the morphine, of course, and my doctor doesn't seem to want to increase doses, unless I'm having surgery. If he's willing to change my medication from time to time when I develop a tolerance, I think that might be better than increasing it, and maybe that's what he's thinking. I don't think he's willing to prescribe extended release along with immediate release for breakthrough pain, but I just consider myself lucky to have some pain relief. I know some pain management doctors only do injections.

Can I take 975mg Tylenol daily on a long term basis? 28F, no health conditions. Non smoker and non drinker. Can 3 regular strength Tylenol (325mg) spaced out throughout the day still be safe if taken long term or am I damaging my liver? I was taking 2000mg but I cut down. I have been taking them for headaches. Yes I know about the rebound headaches. Just curious about safety.

How much tylenol can I take as a 4'10, 115 lb adult? I know for adults the recommendation is to not exceed a 3000-ish mg dosage per day. But I'm a small individual and it gets a little confusing for me because I don't want to overdo it. I have 500mg tablets and I try not to take it often at all but I'm going through a dental issue right now so I want to take 2 a day.

Is it safe to take 500mg of acetaminophen daily for mild headaches? Hi, I'm 55 male and have been taking Tylenol (acetaminophen) every night for the last month before bed to prevent getting a headache in the morning (or during the night). I still haven't figured out why I'm developing the headache. Could be the pillow I'm sleeping on but I've already tried a few different ones. Talked to a headache specialist but she doesn't have an answer. But anyway my question is it safe to take 500mg of acetaminophen daily for a prolonged period of time? I know acetaminophen is safe for the liver if I don't go over the recommended dosage (4gm) but my concern is using it regularly for several months, especially with only 500mg. TYIA

(18F) Should I just go to the ER for real and be honest about my symptoms . Advil is not doing shit and my jaw and chest hurt still, edema is worse and I'm not getting better ☹️ (me again, sorry) Sorry. Me again. I know you said for me to go the ER, I did sorta, but not really. I just went to urgent for a 'UTI' because I'd feel stupid just going and being only 18 and being like "ohhh my chest hurts I'm going to die!!! Panic attack! Hysterical female alert!!! Need a physch referral STAT!", because realistically me having a heart issue would be low, and if my pee was okay, I should be ok. Also I have a past social axienty disorder diagnosis from when I was 12, which I don't have anymore because I got over being bullied by some evil 7th graders and no longer had a panic attack when talking to anyone outside of my parents, but I know any doctor is gonna look on that and be like "Chest hurts? Social axienty disorder? Erm...this is a panic attack." I also am extremely afraid of the ER, mainly because I went once because when I was 16/17, I was having terrible reactive hypoglycaemia due to a medication I was on and felt really worried and confused because my vision was getting dark, and the doctor there got super mad at me for being there said something like "There's literally people dying out in the back and you being here is taking me away from them." and called me insane and mentally ill and said I "clearly have to see a physch again because clearly I'm not doing any better", because I had... healed mild scars on my arm. Yeah. I don't like it there, and honestly I'd rather die than live in fear of having an upset middle aged man accuse me of allowing people to die. (Hyperbole, don't actually want to die). Also sometimes my throat shakes itself and stutters because I issues with involuntary movement of my muscles so it makes me sound anxious when I'm not. So I thought I'd just ignore it what's going on and take Advil and try to go to school. This is not working out. My edema is now on my toes and there's brown dots. I now have almost constant chest pain and jaw pain. It's like, icy cool, burning but freezing. And walking to the bathroom makes me feel like I ran a mile. I've had two instances of this terrible, awful feeling where my breathing gets cold and intense, my chest feels like it's been stabbing and burning, pain spreads to my jaw, left arm, back, scapula, etc and I can't fucking breath. Once it was at about 2am which made be unable to sleep, and the other at 9PM the next day while taking a bath. I fell on the second one because the dizziness/unsteadiness from my breathing, I got up tho. It got better after about an hour so. Pain never went away, particularly on the chest. This is kinda freaking me out more, mainly because it hurts, but also because Advil is not helping so that might not mean I just bruised something. My dad offered to take me to the ER and I just...couldn't. I really really don't wanna go. What if it is just anxiety or somatic and I feel like an idiot? If my urine is fine, dude seemed to think my feet were fine, than that would mean I'm fine correct? I didn't tell him about the chest pains. And if I think "should I go to the ER", than it's not like an emergency...I'm not dying, it's not awful. I just feel so stupid complaining about chest pains and being young and going to the ER. I know I got risk factors which would make it more likely (obesity, insulin issues, most likely having PCOS, etc...) But still I'm only 18. I might call 811 (imagine the urgent care equivalent to calling 911, it's kinda like that) and ask them what to do. Idk but going and it being nothing would be so fucking embarrassing and I don't want to imagine that. Please please tell me what to do. I don't know what to do. Should I take more advil and more frequently for one more day and hope it gets less worse? I do feel less tired today. I was able to do things. I really want my life and body to just fix itself already. My parents are getting more and more frustrated with me being sick too and I know my dad's going to have a freak out on me. Ignoring it is not helping . Any advice appreciated. Old post: Update to my last post. Saw a Naturopath, he seems to think I'm fine and it's just hormonal. Still getting more worse though. (use this for reference) Some people asked for updates on my last post, and No..I did not go to the ER or a registered doctor, I'm sorry. Going to a doctor takes a month, so I can't just go in like that... I really doubt what's happening to me is an emergency, and also my mom gets really angry if I bring it up saying that because I don't have an infection or I'm not passing out so going to the ER would be wasting their time. Idk anymore. Maybe I'm just a really bad hypochondriac and it's all in my head. My friends are really urging me to go to the ER or Urgent care though, I really don't know who to believe... So I went to a Naturopath for something unrelated and he said my edema is most likely just hormonal and stuff like that. He took my blood pressure and it absolutely drops when I stand up, like, immediately which is strange because I didn't do that before. Also my heart beat is fine...he can also do tests that an endo could, which is good because seeing the endo is about 9 months. I do have new some new issues though :(When I woke up today the edema was all over my feet now, like, up to my toes, it wasn't like that before. Also my hair is kinda falling out a bit when I touch it, and urinating now burns and hurts, my crotch hurts all the time. My urine has pulp in it and it's all cloudy. Also the heel on the back of my feet is completely numb and one of my toes have gotten a bit red. I also got a bit of a fever. My chest also really hurts,

Is a small overdose of paracetamol okay? Would it be dangerous to take just slightly more than the recommended dosage of paracetamol or even ibuprofen? I got my wisdom tooth removed 4 days ago and I've developed a dry socket. The pain is unbearable. I usually have a very high pain threshold but this is ridiculously bad. I've been back to the dentist 3 times in the last 4 days and they've explained that my jaw bone and nerve are exposed but it will heal in the next 2 weeks max. They've packed the hole with medicated gauze of some sort twice now but both times it's been dislodged (and accidentally swallowed) when I've tried to eat. I've been alternating paracetamol and ibuprofen to help with the pain but it's not really helping. I find myself doubled over in agony for hours and hours every day, I've only been able to eat small amounts once a day maximum and I'm losing my mind. I took both paracetamol and ibuprofen about 2 hours ago and I am still in agonising pain- can I take more? Or is that stupid ☹

Can I take 1300 mg of acetaminophen without any damage? I take tramadol pills with added acetaminophen for back pain (37,5mg of tram to 325mg of acetam ratio). I take it only when it's necessary, last time I took the pill was a month ago, low-dose doesn't help. I also have to take full liver panel in a few weeks and I worry it'll show bad results. Maybe I'm paranoid but the last time I noticed slight pain in the right side of my abdomen, where my liver is. Will I be ok?

Increase in migraine frequency with Topamax Hi everyone, I have a question about Topamax use. My story is kind of a drawn out one... I was diagnosed with migraines at 12 (I'm now 29) and had them under control with an episode about bi-weekly. However, back in March I had one that persisted for 18 days and I missed almost a full week of work because of it, I ended up in the ER, which I have never done before. While there they administered a lumbar puncture and CT Scan and after still not finding relief my PCM put me on Topamax 50mg and finally gave me a referral to see a Neurologist. I've never taken daily meds and have only ever taken abortives so I was hesitant to start taking Topamax. After my first visit with my Neurologist at the start of May he increased my dosage of Topamax to 100mg and prescribed me a new abortive of Relpax 40mg (before I was taking Maxalt dissolvable, which now I find to have been more effective for me). My issue with Topamax though is that it doesn't help me and I feel as though it is actually causing headaches/migraines because I have had what feels like no relief when before I started daily maintenance in March my episodes were (as I mentioned) bi-weekly at most. Now I have at least a dull headache every day and a full blown migraine every other day. I don't like to use my abortives a lot because I know they can cause rebounds so I try to use them sparingly so I resort to Tylenol 325mg or 500mg. Has anyone else experienced this with Topamax? I see him next week and plan to voice my concern then but I've read a few encounters online of people with similar experiences and was wondering if anyone here has as well?

Question on ibuprofen (UK) Question, I understand the difference in ibuprofen and ibuprofen lysine as the latter is more soluble therefore 'faster acting' but why is ibuprofen acid tablets 200mg but ibuprofen lysine is 342mg? Does ibuprofen lysine have 142mg more ibuprofen in it? Or is 142mg the lysine salts? I'm in the UK and we have strict control of medications so what's on the box has to be 100% honest, and it says "ingredients 100% ibuprofen lysine" where as the former says the same "100% ibuprofen acid" TLDR why is ibuprofen tablets 200mg but ibuprofen lysine 342mg?

Can I take 4 x 600mg ibuprofen? Hey guys! I had my wisdom teeth removed and I've been taking 3 x 600mg a day with 4 x 200mg paracetamol as well. However, the pain comes back quickly after a couple hours and taking one more ibuprofen would definitely make sure I am not in pain for the whole day. Is it safe to take 4 x 600mg ibuprofen + with a paracetamol each time?

Coping with side effects? Any remedies out there to make me more comfortable? 37f vaxed with pfizer. First time getting covid. Im on vacation too which is obviously ruined. First 24hrs i felt like dying. I had severe body aches, nausea, dry heaving, low fever, chills, migraine that wouldnt let up. I laid in bed moaning with a cold washcloth on me. Next day i felt significantly better. Thought i was on the mend. Today im back to the body aches and fatigue and dizziness. I feel like a truck hit me. Anybody have an coping mechanisms aside from me alternating motrin and tylenol every 4 hours and taking zofran for the nausea? Yesterday a shower felt great gonna try that again. And sitting in the sun felt good. Just want to hear whats been working for everyone else.

My Timeline & Symptoms Caught Covid for the second time last week (first time Dec 2022) and wanted to share my timeline/symptoms in case anyone found it useful. I have GAD and both times Covid has exacerbated anxiety symptoms. Day 0: Serious sore throat, very tired Day 1: Extreme sore throat, headache, skin so sore to touch. Fatigued and generally feeling under the weather. Took max dose of paracetamol throughout the day and night. Day 2: Extreme anxiety. Had a rolling panic attack that lasted all day. No appetite, nausea, diarrhoea & breathing issues. It felt like I was breathing through fur. Day 3: Still had serious anxiety with some panic attacks. Breathing issues continued, blood Ox was normal. Nausea and no appetite continued. Day 4: Still very anxious, panic attacks subsided. Breathing issues lightened thankfully. Similar to normal congestion. So tired. Day 5: Similar to day 4. Developed a cough Day 6: Current day. Tested very faint positive so I'm nearing the end of the active infection. Extremely fatigued, napping for 3 hours at a time, cough worsened. Generally feel shitty but so thankful the anxiety symptoms have lessened.

Is taking 600 mg of ibuprofen every eight hours okay? I've had my period for about 4 months. My hemoglobin levels were very low (around 4.7) and I went to the ER and the doctor said to get a blood transfusion. I can't afford one so I opted into a special program from my university to get the Mirena. I've had it for nearly a week. The nurse practitioner who put it said that it is critical for me to stop the bleeding ASAP as IUDs can take months to stop the blood. She suggested that I take 600 mg of ibuprofen every eight hours to slow down the bleeding. It has helped a lot with cramps and the bleeding actually is starting to go down. I take it with food and actually only do it about twice a day. If I don't take the ibuprofen, I have unbearable cramps. It's been a godsend so far but I am scared I'm going to be addicted to it or it'll mess up my stomach or whatever else. Is it safe to continue taking the ibuprofen at the recommended dose? I have been doing this for nearly a week now. Other medicines I am taking include a prescribed women's prenatal vitamin and otc iron. I am 19 and F.

First day on prednisone for sinus issues/possible allergies - bad muscle pain. Is this normal or concerning? I have struggled with sinus issues for years (21F if that helps), and since they seem to have somewhat of a seasonal pattern, my new ENT doc put me on a short course of prednisone and suggested allergy testing if that helps. I'm supposed to start at 40mg/day, then decrease by 10mg/day every 3 days. I started today (technically yesterday, since it's after 3am and I apparently have no hope of sleeping) and by this evening I noticed my sinus symptoms and fatigue were a LOT better... but my body aches were extremely bad. It's like everything from my lower back downward is inflamed and uncomfortable. Even if I were tired, I doubt I could sleep because it is so distracting. I took some extra-strength tylenol earlier and that seemed to help a bit, but it's coming back. Also tried ice packs, massage, etc, with little to no relief. I'm not sure how much acetaminophen is safe to take on prednisone either. My doc was pretty dismissive in terms of side effects and precautions, so I'm not sure what to be concerned about and what I should expect to go away. tl;dr: First day on prednisone and some websites listed muscle pain as a 'serious' side effect, so I'm wondering if I should dismiss this and try to deal with it or keep a closer eye.

Benadryl isn't working as it used to! So I've taken Benadryl a few times in my life, mostly to get rid of hives. I take Benadryl a few times a year, at most. Today, I took one at 9:45 CST to relieve some flu symptoms, but mostly so I could sleep through the night. I haven't been sleeping well lately, and actually only slept ~4 hours yesterday despite my best efforts. I have to work 12 hours shifts the next 4/5 days, so I was really trying to start it off with a good night's sleep. In the past, I've taken half a Benadryl and it knocked me out cold. Today I took a whole one, and all it's doing is making me feel woozy/lightheaded. If I close my eyes, I can rest, but I can't cross over into REM sleep. The only other things I've taken today are 2 Tylenol, 1000 mg of garlic extract, and vitamin C (a doctor my boyfriend works with swore it'd make me feel better, but I think he's full of shit) Should I take more? Why isn't it working like it used to? :(

Covid 19 positive, symptoms are really hard Hello all, I am 26 years old and live in Germany. My girlfriend was positive, unfortunately I was also diagnosed 6 days later. My PCR has also been positive since the day before yesterday, CT value of 23. Yesterday I already had a relatively annoying sore throat and very slight pain in my limbs. But when I woke up just now and tried to breathe through my throat, it hurt a lot. It's like my throat is closed up - not much air went through, so I have to breathe more with my nose. My lymph nodes are swollen and it hurts really bad when I cough or swallow. I am 26 years old and live in Germany. I immediately took paracetamol BC 500 MG. Can I actually take ibuprofen in addition? At the same time? It hurts so much...

Am I at risk for overdosing on OTC Painkillers? I have an ear infection and I haven't gone the doctor because I'm trying to just use painkillers to let it pass on it's own painlessly. This is because I am currently in the United States but I am a Canadian citizen and therefore medically uninsured in the USA and cannot afford the costs. However my worry is that I could be doing damage to myself via the painkillers. Right now my current dosage is as follows: Every 6 hours I take 2 Advil (Ibuprofen) 200mg each, and 2 Tylenol (Acetaminophen) 500mg each. It has been like this for about 3 days now. Now I am much gassier when taking them aswell as once my stomach hurt and felt a bit nauseous. Is this okay? If not how should I change, note without painkillers the ear infection is quite painful and I cannot do any daily tasks or get outta bed.

Ideal interval for mixing ibuprofen and tylenol? Had all 4 wisdoms removed yesterday, feels worse today. I have 600mg ibuprofen (take every 6 hours) and 500-1000mg if Tylenol (take up to 1,000mg every y hours), should i wait 6 hours between taking either, or can i alternate every 3 hours between them Ex: 600mg ibuprofen at 12pm, 1,000mg Tylenol at 3pm, 600mg ibuprofen at 6pm, 1,000mg Tylenol at 9pm? Or should i space them out more? Other than alternativng them is safe, i cant find a schedule, and my mouth hurts too much to call my pharmacist.

Advice needed 5 days after extraction (please) Sorry for the gross picture but I have poor mental health and really struggling to deal with everything - any archive would be really appreciated. Wisdom LR8 tooth was removed as was the molar next to it. On day 1 stitches closed up the whole area and now on day 5 they have started dissolving/coming away which is leaving a hole. Seems to have clotted okay and until today pain has been manageable apart from at night because I wake up every 3 hours probably from sleeping on the affected area. I don't know if it's getting worse, if waves of pain mean infection, but I am so exhausted mentally and physically that I am really struggling to see the light or have the energy to contact the Dental hospital I was treated at. I'm taking vitamin C and D daily and the max dose of ibuprofen + Anadin (paracetamol) for the pain which was ok up until today really. Bad tastes come and go but I've been saline rinsing after every time I eat and before bed etc. doing everything as instructed. I smoke but didn't smoke for the first 72 hours after the clot had formed. Any help or advice or kind words would be appreciated.

I think I'm taking pain medication wrong. What's the best way to take pain meds? Age: 32 Weight: 230 Duration of Complaint: 3 weeks Current Meds: Ibuprofen (see below!) So up until recently, I've had the good fortune to only need pain medication a couple times a month for the odd headache. But over the last three weeks, I've developed daily persistent headaches and jawaches that last pretty much all day, from about an hour after waking up until I fall asleep. I've been taking 400mg of Ibuprofen twice daily most days (800mg total) but I've had a few bad days where I took it three times for the maximum daily dose of 1200mg and still it wasn't enough to keep me from rocking back and forth in bed unable to sleep because of 7/10 level pain in my head and my jaw. I'm talking dull but strong throbbing pain wrapping around my head, running down the sides of my face, and all the way down to my very chin. It often feels like I just took a couple of good hits in the jaw from Rocky Balboa. I finally got to see my doctor today and he prescribed 600mg Ibuprofen. I get to see my dentist next week for what seems to be some sudden and intense TMJ trouble, after this hurricane business blows over. Until then I'm just going to be trying to handle the pain. After those few awful nights where I had already taken the 1200mg maximum dose and still was in terrible pain, I started wondering if maybe I was taking painkillers wrong. When should you take painkillers for a long-lasting episode of pain? Do you take it at the first sign of pain, do you take it when the pain starts interfering with your life, do you take it when the pain becomes too much to bear? What should you do when you take a dose, and then an hour or two later you're still in a lot of pain? Do you take the next dose as early as possible or should you still try to space them out 6 hours apart? And what should you do if you've already taken your maximum dosage for the day, but the day isn't over yet and you're still in a lot of pain? I've read that Ibuprofen can be supplemented with Acetaminophen, but I worry that I'll damage my body if I take too much medication. I've never been much of a pill taker but I've taken more ibuprofen in the last three weeks than I have in my entire life, and I'm a little shook over how on 3 or 4 occasions the maximum OTC dose still wasn't enough to bring the pain down to bearable levels. I want to make sure I'm doing things right so I don't cause any damage to my organs and also stand the best possible chance of keeping my pain at manageable levels. Thanks for reading and sorry for the super basic question, I'm just a newbie to the world of persistent and long-lasting pain.

Fever, safe to sleep I am a 28 year old male white 185lbs 5'10". I am ill with some sickness which left me achy all day. I took 6 advil over the course of 14 hours and 2 tylenol. The last advil was 2 hours ago and tylenol was 4 hours ago. My fever got to just above 102 when I has tons od clothing on (was shivering before). After shedding some layers I am working on getting it down and I float between 100-101 with an ice pack on my head. Is it safe to sleep or will my temperature rise as I sleep to unsafe levels? Should I take any more tylenol or advil?

Tylenol and Ibuprofen 5'10 200 lbs 31 years old Is it okay to take 1000 mg Tylenol and 600 mg Ibuprofen at the same time?

What is the maximum safe dose of ibuprofen and paracetamol? [20F] I'm getting confused trying to find the answer online. When I had a surgery leaving me with some bad (temporary) pain I'm so sure I was told by my doctor I could take 2 ibuprofen (200mg each) and 2 paracetamol (500g each) three times a day (every 4 hours), and I did so throughout my recovery. Sometimes (rarely) I get REALLY intense migraines, and I've taken this same combination for this in the past. But recently someone told me that isn't at all recommended, or even safe. Now I'm wondering if I've been accidentally taking way too much. Thankfully I usually avoid painkillers unless totally unbearable, and haven't taken this combination very often.

Contusion in lower back from jumping from a 15m high cliff into water. So, I'm from Austria and on holiday here on the island Karpethos in Greece and because I'm (27 | M | 1,8m tall) stupid I did this pretty high jump (over 15m) yesterday and injured my lower back. The jump felt alright but as soon as I hit the water something felt weird in my lower back. I was able to swim back to shore (about 500m) but then needed help to get back to our place at the beach (another 200m to walk) but I was able to move my feet and legs. My friends called an ambulance and they had to carry me with a stretcher, but after a few hours in the hospital where they gave me painkillers intravenous and had the xrays come back negative they told me I had a contusion in my muscles and would be able to leave the hospital the same day. It was rough to get out of the bed but as soon as i was on my feet walking was manageable. Anyway, I was told to rest a few days and take paracetamol and/or ibuprofen depending on the pain I experience. And here is my first question, they told me I can take 2/3 pills a day (500mg paracetamol/ 400mg Ibuprofen) but what would be better in this situation and can I actually switch between them or take them together? My second question would be about the time this takes to get better. I have a flight back to Austria this Sunday and all I want is to be able to take that flight. Will it get good enough until then? What else besides resting, taking painkillers can I do to speed up the recovery? Thanks for anyone reading and or answering! Btw, I posted the video in another sub, so if you wanna see it just go to my profile. Cheers

[40m, Australia] Is it safe to take 1000mg paracetamol (acetaminophen) and 400mg ibuprofen once daily? Is it safe to take 1000mg paracetamol (acetaminophen) and 400mg ibuprofen once daily? I'm not talking about the max dosage every day, just the above in the morning. I understand that ibuprofen might be a bit harmful with long term use, so what about just the paracetamol?

How much ibuprofen/Tylenol is too much? I am 20 years old and had quite improper pull up form over this last winter in my pull ups. The result was tricep tendinitis and tennis elbow both in my right arm (or so I've been diagnosed). There are also postural contributors (been sitting at a computer doing online college class for the last year) so my PT and I have been working on strengthening my back and core to potentially resolve the issue as she has attributed the whole thing to muscle imbalances (my back and triceps are weaker on my right side). But for nearly 6 months now I've been taking Tylenol 500mg and ibuprofen 200 mg. I didn't take very much initially but in the last 2-3 months I pretty much take one or the other (or both) every 4 hours. Okay mostly both. This never exceeds the recommended dosage for 24 hours but I know there are long term effects and I'm very concerned that my doctor isn't taking that into consideration as much as he should be and I'd rather not spend another $300 for an appointment for him to tell me something else. He seems to be much more concerned that I don't take ibuprofen on an empty stomach. I will recover from tendinitis eventually but permanent liver/kidney damage is not something I want to deal with. Am I taking too much?

31M Had lower wisdom tooth removed today, can I switch from Paracetamol (acetaminophen) to ibuprofen? Had lower wisdom tooth removed today, can I switch from Paracetamol (acetaminophen) to ibuprofen? My dentist prescribed me paracetamol 1g, 1 pill every 4 hours (but forgot to mention not to take more than 4 in the span of 24h). I have already taken 2 grams of paracetamol and about to take the 3rd, I have ibuprofen 400 mg at home and was wondering if I could use it instead. The anesthesia has worn off and I still feel mild pain.

My migraine isn't going away I 28F am having an awful migraine. I had some eye pain yesterday and today i ended up with a full blown migraine. My head felt like a pressure balloon and the pain was mostly located on the forehead with intense nausea. I took 1000 mg of Tylenol around 2 hours ago and while it definitely decreased the pain it didn't get rid of it and its still quite bothersome mostly the eyes and forehead area. I cant take advil because of my GERD and current bout of gastritis. Can I take more tylenol or is it not safe to do so? Are there any other things I can do? Im desperate for some relief

How many ibuprofens and Tylenol is too much? 23F BMI 22ish. I took 7 ibuprofens and 3 Tylenol's. I took them in combination over the past 3 hours. Is that okay?

can i take more than one brand of pain killers ? I (15f, 4'8", 150lb, white) have a fever, and I'm taking Tylenol (500mg) to try and reduce it. I've taken 3 today. The Tylenol doesn't seem to be working, so I was wondering if I can take a different type of fever reducer. Such as Advil (200mg), or would I have to wait a while to take it? If so, how long?

(21F) Can I take Ibuprofen 800mg for longer than 10 consecutive days? I got my wisdom teeth taken out almost 11 days ago. I have been taking ibuprofen 800 almost every day since. I know that you're not supposed to take it long term, but I am still having significant pain. Should I just keep taking the ibuprofen or switch to something like Tylenol for the pain?

Woke up today feeling GREAT! Developed a sore throat throughout the day and now I have a fever of 102.5. Coughed a couple times but not frequent (yet?). I went to a concert in a city a few days ago so I know I caught SOMETHING. I'm 22m 245lbs 5'8. 8 hours ago my temp was 99.1. Few hours later 99.6, then 101.0. Now it's 102.5 Is 102.5 concerning? I just took two tylenol 5min ago. Can I take ibuprofen too? Sore throat hurts but not sure if COVID/Strep/redo. infection. Do i need to visit a doctor or can I let it run it's course for a day or two? EDIT: It was weird how fast this came on. I don't get sick often but if I do it's usually what I experienced today but drawn out 1-3 days before I feel "sick" sick"

Is this a migraine? 24F, 180cm, 62.6kg, Canada, no medications or underlying health conditions besides TMJ dysfunction I've never had a migraine before, to my knowledge, and was wondering if this sounds like that. I woke up with a headache that has only worsened into the mid-afternoon. It's a persistent vice-like throb running from my nose/temples to the top of my head. It's worse on the right but is present on both sides. Looking at my phone on the lowest brightness hurts, as does the overcast sky outside. I'm nauseous and dizzy but haven't had any gastrointestinal symptoms. Changing positions makes it worse. Walking hurts (the footfalls). My vision is unchanged. I would describe the pain as a 7/10 with spikes higher wherein I just put pressure on my temples with my hands and breathe until they pass. I have TMJ dysfunction so I'm used to a pretty constant tension headache and jaw pain, but that doesn't impede my functioning at all. This is different—I'm not debilitated but focusing on anything is difficult, and screens are especially bad. I have an essay due tonight but looking at my computer is intolerable. What can I do to alleviate this pain? I've taken 1000mg Tylenol to no avail (at least 45 minutes in; hoping it just needs a little longer). Should I take ibuprofen? Just lie down in the dark and wait? Thank you in advance!! Happy to hear from laypeople with headache tips as well!

A doctor on another subreddit claims that use of ibuprofen even within normal limits can be dangerous. Is this true? 30, M, 150 lbs, average weight. "Ibuprofen with prolonged use, even within normal limits have the potential to develop ulcers, heart issues and kidney failure. In general stick to Tylenol, 2 pills of 500 mg, maximum 4 times a day. Be mindful of that you are taking medicine and don't take any daily without seeing a doctor." I say this as someone with chronic tension headaches. Sometimes I take 2 pills away, sometimes 8, usually no more than 2 per day. I get super freaked out, I try alternatives, but nothing seems to work yet.. My kidney labs seem normal as do my liver. I have specifically asked docs about ibuprofen usage and none have told me it was too much if im not taking max dosages. I just get freaked out about this.

How many ibuprofen can I take safely? Hi, 19f who has an essay due in about 8 hours. I have a plan but haven't started it cause I've got lower back pain at the moment (should've started it before but I didn't). I took two about 8 hours ago but it didn't make much difference, the pain is gone when I lie down but when I sit at the desk it's pretty bad and very distracting. I have big boobs, probably the problem. I'd rather not miss the deadline cause I don't wanna be capped at 40, but I'm kinda scared to take more than 2 ibuprofen. It's 3:30 am so I can't really buy any gels or anything, so ibuprofen/ paracetamol are my only options, please give advice, thanks :)

Alternating Motrin and Tylenol? It's been years since I needed to do this for my kids. I need to do it for myself today. I have thrown up since this morning at 5:30. Started with fever, nausea, and chills at 2:00am. I took Motrin at 1:15 so I can take Tylenol at 3 or 4? And the. Motrin again at 6? I hate having a fever. I just feel so unwell and uncomfortable. I'd rather be throwing up. I do work in a school so I was bound to get sick again. I'm a 36 female 170lbs. 5'3.

When can I (32 yo, 144 lb, 5 foot 4 female) take my next 1000 mg Tylenol dose? I have a fever, aches and diarrhea. I need to take Tylenol and ibuprofen to bring my fever to a comfortable level. I am trying to stagger the doses and am in the midst of readjusting to Advil every 4 hours and Tylenol every 6. Here's the Tylenol I've taken so far. When can I take my next dose? Don't want to damage liver 3:00 Pm yesterday: 1000 mg 9:00 Pm yesterday: 1000 mg 7:00 AM "today": 1000 mg 1:30 Pm "today": 1000 mg

I feel so stupid, forgot I already took paracetamol an hour ago.. \[Adult Dutch female] I had some work done at the dentist and it's all quite sensitive so I take 1 gram paracetamol about every 6-7 hours as pain relief. Today I took it at 9AM, 4PM and 11PM, but after I took them I realised that I forgot I took them already at 10PM. Will that cause any damage for my liver or anything because I took too much in one hour? Or is it ok? And can I still take a 400mg ibuprofen on top of it which I do to really make sure I have no pain during the night or shall I skip that now i have too much paracetamol in my system?

Tylenol_Advil

How long can I take ibuprofen while alternating with acetaminophen I (17M) have been dealing with headaches/migraines for the past month. I have been alternating ibuprofen and acetaminophen each day so for one day I take 200-400mg of ibuprofen then wait 6 hours if I need it again then wait the next day then use 1000mg of acetaminophen and do the same as the ibuprofen my question is is it still safe to do this or should I stop. I also sometimes skip days so I have none of them for a day while I deal with headache.

Long lasting but moderate symptoms Age: 37 Sex: Male Height and weight: 6'0", 258 Other medical conditions: none except for overweight (not obese) Prescription meds: none I've been experiencing some symptoms for two weeks now. They appeared out of the blue. Daily symptoms are fatigue, headaches and muscle aches, sometimes a slight cough or runny nose. The headaches sometimes come with a feeling of sinus pressure or pressure in my head. Not major but it's there. I had some feverish nights early on but I haven't felt that in a bit. I don't have allergies If I don't take any OTC pain relievers, the fatigue in particular is debilitating, feel the need to take multiple hour-or-more naps per day and no energy to do anything in between. However, on the other hand the fatigue and aches and pains mostly go away with a small dose of acetaminophen (500 mg) 1-2x per day, sometimes intermixed with a single 400 mg dose of ibuprofen. But I am worried about doing this over such a long period, I know daily acetaminophen is not a great idea long term. I went to urgent care three days ago, flu and Covid negative, no fever, glands not swollen (according to doc, they feel a little larger to me but they are not like golf balls or something). BP 131/80. That was really all they could do. But I am just concerned about how long these symptoms have lasted. They haven't really gotten any worse but they haven't gotten much better either, in particular the fatigue feels the same as ever. I have a PCP appt for the 17th but obvi that's a long way off. My main questions: -in the event I can't see a doctor sooner is it ok to take a low daily dose of acetaminophen (500-1000 mg daily) for a total of a month (that is, two additional weeks) -what are probable causes? -is this worth a visit to an ER to get more immediate answers?

Took 1000mg of paracetamol an hour ago and still in pain, can I take ibuprofen? Really awful pain from gum inflammation. It's night time and desperate to sleep. I took 1000mg of paracetamol about an hour ago and I still can't lay down cause it hurts too much. Is it alright if I take 400mg of ibuprofen I'm biologically female but please refer to me with he/him, 17, 165cm and 83kg. Never smoke never anything.
